CHARMING ENTERTAINMENT.

The Stereoptican Entertainment and Sociable at the First M. E. Church.

The auditorium of the First M. E. church was filled last evening with an audience assembled to witness the stereopticon exhibition given under the direction of Will Stevens, Esq., accompanied by a lecture by Rev. Mr.

Stewart. Since the last exhibition Mr Stevens has made considerable improvement in the handling of the light, and the display on this occasion was creditable indeed and heartily enjoyed. The views were sufficiently varied not the accompanying descriptions read by Mr. Stewart, made the views the more interesting. At the close of the exhibition a beautiful, colored view entitled "Rock of Ages," was given, accompanied by one verse of the old hymn, sang by a ccuple of little girls. It captivated everyone, and the applause was prolonged and hearty. The "good night" gave visitors a rapid descent from the sublime to the ridiculous, and prepared them to enjoy the good things prepared for the sociable, which was held immediately after in the church parlors. Another exhibition will be given in one week, but $1 each.

IMPOSING CORTEGE.

Last Tribute to the Memory of Edward C. Lucas.

The funeral of the late Edward C. Lucas took place at 2 p. m. yesterday, from the residence on Thirteenth and Chicago, the procession forming there and marching through the main part of the city en route to the Holy Sepulcher. The fire department turned out in a body, in full uniform, and preceded by the Union Pacific band, marched at the head of the cortege. A delegation from the Council Bluffs fire department was also present, and a long line of carriages followed to the cemetery.

NED HANLAN DEAD

An Unfortunate Accident Brings

Him to an Untimely End. That good old dog We ne'er shall see him more

-After Grimes. Yes, Ned Hanlan is dead, and Doc. Gladdish, the well known Twelfth street druggist, is in deep grief thereat. Ned was only a dog-a big white shaggy dog. But he was such a peculiar character in his way, such an original purp that he had become invested before the accident which killed him with a peculiar dignity, and he was generally recog-nized as an important member of good society. Ned went up to McMahon's wholesale drug store with one of Gladdish's clerks and fell through a skylight, striking about fifteen feet below. He fell on something which cut a hole in his breast and it was necessary to put him out of his misery.

Ned was found under peculiar circumstances. He was thrown out of a window when a whining puppy and left a waif on the wide, wide world. Gladdish picked him up and gave him shelter and care, and Ned never forgot it. But he didn't repay this kindness as most dogs would—with only wags of the tail and caresses—but he was sensible enough to turn his efforts in a practical direction and endeavor to increase the funds of the firm by picking up money wherever he could find it and carrying it home. Ned was an insatiate lover of "the dust," and that so without a particle of training. He would loaf around a saloon or restaurant for hours and watch his chance, until some careless fellow dropped a coin, when as quick as a flash Ned would pounce upon it and disappear out of the door like a shot. He would take a bee-line for home, and never halt for the most tempting bone until he had deposited his "half" or "quarter" in "Bill's" hand, after which he would seem content. Such a canine was a valuable proptriet court in the conclusion of the crty. He would go under a sidewalk trial of Berkman, Bushman's clerk, and find a coin as quickly as one could the charge of embezzle- pick it from the ground, and put it in ment, and in the opening of his master's hand. Ned had the failthe case of Maitland, who is indicted ing, if failing it be, of recognizing but for burglary. much might be said, but space forbids. He was a puppy in age when killed and was rapidly learning everything in the line of canine accomplishments. In his money-making propensity, however, he was original and had no rivals. "Requiscat in pace."
